His name is synonymous with great moments in history. Bob Schieffer has covered crimes large and small, and on that fateful day when President John F. Kennedy was assassinated, Bob was at the city desk when a woman called and asked for a ride to Dallas. She was Lee Harvey Oswald’s mother. Bob wrote down her address on the west side of Fort Worth, and he and another reporter drove her to Dallas.

Throughout his long career in print and broadcast, Bob’s thoughtful journalism helped us understand our shared history as we lived it. In the Bob Schieffer College of Communication, students learn to work with persistence, civility and integrity – values epitomized by our legendary namesake.

Wallace B. “Wally” Eberhard passed away on Oct. 7, 2018—his 87th birthday. He was a self-professed lover of libraries, a master of journalism history, and a dedicated professor who taught hundreds of students at the University of Georgia’s Grady College of Journalism and Mass Communication.

The study of journalism history held a special place in Eberhard’s life. He was editor of American Journalism for four years and received AJHA’s highest honor, the Sidney Kobre Award for Lifetime Achievement in Journalism History, in 2007. Due to Eberhard’s expertise in military and war reporting, AJHA named its annual award for research on media and war after him. He later provided a donation that enables AJHA to offer a cash prize with the award.

Eberhard was a prolific book reviewer on topics that included coverage of women’s executions, fictions and frauds, and college news. Each review demonstrated Eberhard’s characteristic fairness and ability to convey constructive criticism gently, his narrative writing style, and above all, his passion for history.

In a Fall 2006 Journalism History review of David Finkelstein and Alistair McCleery’s An Introduction to Book History, Eberhard lamented that few research papers at AEJMC or AJHA explored the history of the book. However, he asserted, the book was a best friend. The review opened with a description of Eberhard’s office, where serious volumes and “Robert Parker potboilers compete for space and attention.” Eberhard wrote that the friendship with books, “like the human variety, leads to occasional conflict, usually when shelf and floor space overflow.”

Eberhard has many friends in the AJHA who remember him not only as a scholar and mentor but also as a delightful conversationalist. Upon Eberhard’s passing, fellow long-time AJHA member Pat Washburn said, “He was an excellent example for all of us who are retired. In other words, keep making contributions to our field as long as you can.”

Welcome

This year’s American Journalism Historians Association convention wraps us in a full circle: The very first AJHA conference convened in Dallas in 1982. We have not been back since, so it’s great to return for another look at the historic Texas town. This huge city—ninth largest in the United States—traces its history to the 1840s, though perhaps many Americans remember it more for two highlights: the Kennedy assassination of 1963 and the television series of 1978-91. Okay. Maybe they were not “highlights.”

Because we’ve returned to our first convention venue, the president’s panel will be taking a special look at the discipline through the decades by featuring some of our outstanding senior members. We’ll also have the opportunity to hear as always from graduate students to established scholars who will offer new research in journalism history. And convention organizers haven’t forgotten our Friday historic tour and Saturday night gala, two AJHA traditions.

I think you’ll enjoy three days of thoughtful and innovative scholarship, lively and even mildly contentious panels, award-winning colleagues, ideas, camaraderie—and a lot of fun. As journalism history should be.

Whether this is your first convention, or whether this is your 38th, I hope you’ll leave pleased and impressed. We know you have many conference invitations and a limited travel budget, so we strive to be the one conference you don’t want to miss.

While an understanding of media history can provide context for many other areas of research, we must also recognize that other disciplines and the sources they use can, in turn, provide context for our historical niche. This panel seeks to examine ways to broaden the spectrum of journalism history by pointing scholars toward sources that are currently overlooked or dismissed as not relevant to our particular field. Panelists will highlight some of the unique sources and perspectives they have incorporated into their research as a way of giving voice to otherwise marginalized groups with the hope of encouraging our discipline to continue to challenge itself to grow and evolve by embracing new approaches and perspectives within the field of journalism history.

Sidney Kobre Award for Lifetime Achievement

Debra Reddin van Tuyll, professor at Augusta University, is the recipient of the 2019 Sidney Kobre Award. Van Tuyll has been an important contributor to AJHA, having served as a member of the Board of Directors and Convention Sites Committee and a Book Award judge.

She has worked as editor or editorial board member for publications that include the Southeastern Review of Journalism History, Journalism History, and Historiography in Mass Communication. She also has served as head of AEJMC’s History Division. Van Tuyll began her association with AJHA through the Southeast Symposium, which she now organizes. She attended her first AJHA National Convention in 2002 and has remained a fixture on the national scene ever since.

In her distinguished career, van Tuyll has made major contributions to the field of media history, particularly the area of transnational journalism. She has amassed an impressive record of research publications, including as author or editor of six books, 15 additional book chapters, 16 peer-reviewed journal articles, and 39 refereed conference papers.

National Award for Excellence in Teaching

David James Vergobbi, associate professor at the University of Utah, is the recipient of the 2019 National Award for Excellence in Teaching. Vergobbi has been nominated for numerous teaching awards at his university. He has inspired not only his colleagues at the University of Utah but also former students who have gone on to become educators themselves.

His students say that he challenges them and makes them remember concepts long after leaving his class, due in part to memorable historical examples. Dr. Vergobbi makes history central to his courses. He draws on historical materials and provides historical context. He encourages students to approach ideas with the mind of an historian. He inspires students to pursue historical research for their dissertations and theses and even to produce historical documentaries.

AJHA’s Education Committee members noted Vergobbi’s sustained excellence in all areas of teaching as well as a commitment to involvement and interaction as cornerstones of the courses he’s taught.

An author’s work does not end when their book hits the shelves. With university presses rarely spending much to promote new releases, media historians have turned to creative techniques to publicize their books in the academy and beyond through social media campaigns, news media coverage, and lectures to niche audiences. This panel will describe how authors can reach new readers and gain a higher profile by adopting proactive publicity methods. Panelists are the authors of the following books: Nicholas Hirshon, We Want Fish Sticks: The Bizarre and Infamous Rebranding of the New York Islanders (University of Nebraska Press, 2018); Amber Roessner, Inventing Baseball Heroes: Ty Cobb, Christy Mathewson, and the Sporting Press in America (LSU Press, 2014); Matthew Pressman, On Press: The Liberal Values That Shaped the News (Harvard University Press, 2018); Anne Farris Rosen, Deep South Dispatch: Memoir of a Civil Rights Journalist (University Press of Mississippi, 2018).

The 2019 American Journalism Historians Association convention brings us full circle: We are back in Dallas, the site of the first AJHA convention in 1982. To commemorate that, this year’s president’s panel brings together a group of some of AJHA’s most experienced scholars who can give us insights on time and change at AJHA. The questions to be discussed by panelists are general, but they are critical: What has changed in journalism history research between that first conference 37 years ago and today? Have methods changed? Has scholarship changed? Has the discipline grown? And, perhaps, what challenges do we continue to face as journalism/mass media historians?
Texas has the distinction of being the only state with three presidential libraries. Documents and artifacts related to Texas native Lyndon Baines Johnson, including Presidential records from the Johnson White House donated by LBJ, reside in an archive and museum at the University of Texas in Austin. Though native New Englanders, the Bush family came to call Texas home. The George H. W. Bush Library (Bush 41) sits on the Texas A & M University campus in College Station, while the George W. Bush Library (Bush 43) is located at Southern Methodist University—just a few miles from our conference hotel. Additionally, Dallas is the site of President John F. Kennedy’s assassination. Located in the former Texas School Book Depository, The Sixth Floor Museum at Dealey Plaza explores Kennedy’s life, death, and legacy within the context of 1960s history and culture. Representatives from all four of these facilities will discuss their holdings, with a special focus on materials of interest to journalism and mass communication historians.

Warren Finch, director of the George H. W. Bush Presidential Library and Museum since 1992, brings thirty years of experience working with the National Archives—including with the Office of Presidential Libraries in Washington, DC, and the Ronald Reagan Library in California. Trained as an archivist, Finch holds an MA in History from Auburn University and a BA from the University of South Alabama.

Krishna Shenoy is a librarian/archivist at The Sixth Floor Museum, where she oversees the Reading Room and the Museum’s library collection and research services. Since joining in 2012, she has expanded resources to represent the rich history and broad spectrum of authors and topics related to the assassination of President Kennedy. Shenoy holds a Master of Library Science from the University of North Texas.

Since 2009, Liza Talbot has been at the LBJ Library, where she wears two hats: a textual archivist specializing in politics, media, and the pre-Presidential period, and the lead for digitization. She built LBJ’s digital library, DiscoverLBJ.org, which contains nearly 50,000 audiovisual and textual items. Talbot has a master’s degree in Archives and Digital Libraries from the University of Texas in Austin.

Distinguished Service to Journalism History

For just the fourth time in AJHA’s history, the organization will present its Distinguished Service Award, which is reserved for those generally outside the field of academe who have made major contributions to the preservation of journalism history.

Currently a faculty associate at the University of Wisconsin-Madison in the School of Journalism and Mass Communication, James P. Danky is the recipient of this rare honor. Danky was responsible for the preservation of a massive newspaper collection, which he tended during a 40-year career at the State Historical Society of Wisconsin—second in size only to the series at the Library of Congress.

Danky was particularly effective at preserving “alternative” publications, meaning that scholars now and into the future will have access to African American, Native American, Alaska natives, Hawaiian natives, Latin American, and Haitian American newspapers, among others.

Local Journalist Award for Outstanding Contribution to the Public Interest

Dianne Solis is the recipient of the 2019 Local Journalist Award for Outstanding Contribution to the Public Interest. She is a reporter at the Dallas Morning News and a former foreign correspondent for the Wall Street Journal based in Mexico. She has reported extensively on the immigration crackdown by the Trump administration and its impact on children.

Throughout her career, Solis has written about people crossing borders, from tales of refugees from Iraq to children from Honduras seeking asylum in Texas. Her passion? Finding the humanity in complex stories.

She holds degrees from Northwestern University and California State University, Fresno, and she was a Nieman Fellow at Harvard University.

Donna Allen Luncheon Speaker

The 2019 Donna Allen speaker is Tracy Everbach, a professor of journalism and a feminist scholar in the Mayborn School of Journalism at the University of North Texas. She teaches undergraduate and graduate classes on race, gender, and media, news reporting, and qualitative research methods.

Her research focuses on women’s work and leadership in journalism, and on media representations of gender and race. She is co-author of Mediating Misogyny: Gender, Technology & Harassment (Palgrave MacMillan, 2018). In 2019, she received the Donna Allen Award for Feminist Advocacy from the Commission on the Status of Women at AEJMC. She is a former newspaper reporter, including 12 years on the city news desk at the Dallas Morning News.

1 PM HISTORIC TOUR
Meet in the hotel lobby at 12:45 pm
Separate ticket required

This year’s tour takes us to Dallas’s West End Historic District. The cabin where Tennessee lawyer John Neely Bryan first established a trading post in Caddo Indian territory still stands in the district, among other historic and modern buildings constructed over the past 178 years.

We’ll start our afternoon at The Sixth Floor Museum at Dealey Plaza, housed on the top two floors of the former Texas School Book Depository. The multimedia experience explores John F. Kennedy’s life, assassination, and legacy within the context of 1960s history and culture. From the museum we will walk past the exact spot where Kennedy was shot and across Dealey Plaza to the John F. Kennedy Memorial Plaza before heading into the Old Red Museum. Constructed in 1892 as the Dallas County Courthouse, the iconic Old Red building now houses artifacts tracing the history of Dallas from prehistoric days to present.

One bus will return to the conference hotel after the Old Red Museum tour (around 4 pm), but another will leave later (8 pm) for those who wish to stay and explore the West End.

Congratulations, Debbie!
Winner: 2019 Sidney Kobre Award for Lifetime Achievement in Journalism History

Augusta University’s Department of Communication is proud to congratulate Dr. Debbie Reddin van Tuyll, a professor at AU for more than a quarter of a century, for being named the 2019 Sidney Kobre Award winner. Dr. van Tuyll has a long history with AJHA going back to her time as a mass communication doctoral student at the University of South Carolina. She has presented research at AJHA more than a dozen times and long has been a major contributor to the AJHA Southeastern Conference held each February in Florida — which has included undergraduate students to share their historical research at the regional conference.

In addition to being the author and editor of seven books on Civil War and transnational journalism topics, she also teaches AU’s media history and media law classes, as well as journalism and public relations courses. She is a co-founder of the Transnational Journalism Conference and is executive editor of The Southeastern Review of Journalism History.

Dr. Thomas A. Mascaro, a professor at Bowling Green State University and chair of the AJHA Awards Committee, said it best about the AU professor: “Dr. van Tuyll exemplifies a lifetime of service to our field and is a fitting member of those we have honored with the prestigious Sidney Kobre Award.”

PANEL DISCUSSION: Media and Race — War and Conflict
Beverly C

Moderator: Patrick S. Washburn, Ohio University

• Steve Hallcock, Point Park University
• Jinx Coleman Broussard, Louisiana State University
• Pamela E. Walck, Duquesne University
• Kathleen Wickham, University of Southern Mississippi

Four scholars will discuss media coverage and representation of race issues over the course of a century. Kathleen Wickham will explore the significance of symbols in the Southern United States since the Civil War, contrasting early 20th century efforts to memorialize Confederate veterans and redeem their loss through the prism of the “Lost Cause” with recent attempts to remove, contextualize, and replace such memorials throughout the South. Pamela Walck will discuss how the Pittsburgh Courier covered several major civil rights issues in the years leading up to America’s involvement in World War II—and how that set the stage for the black newspaper’s wildly popular Double Victory campaign. Jinx Broussard will demonstrate how the black press was one of the most effective forces in American society during World War II, reporting on one of the greatest stories from a racial perspective that sought to correct misrepresentation of black troops and tell the true story of their loyalty and valor. Steve Hallcock will examine how twelve major daily mainstream newspapers in the South, the North, and the West covered the 1963 Birmingham, Alabama, church bombing—finding some striking differences in framing.
6 PM GALA DINNER
     Meet in the hotel lobby at 5:40 pm
     Separate ticket required

The Gala will be hosted by Sevy’s Grill at 8201 Preston Road, a half-mile walk from the conference hotel. Sevy’s is an independent, family-run restaurant known for its Aztek Grill, on which food is cooked over a live fire fueled by hickory wood. Dinner will include an appetizer, entrée, and dessert. In addition, there will be a cash bar.

39TH ANNUAL
AMERICAN JOURNALISM HISTORIANS
ASSOCIATION CONVENTION

October 1-3, 2020
Sheraton Memphis Downtown

Make plans to join us next year as AJHA travels to Memphis. Home of the blues, soul, and rock ‘n’ roll, Memphis sits where Tennessee meets Arkansas and Mississippi. Starting as Chickasaw Indian territory, the city grew as a center of trade for the South’s cotton. Later it became a cultural incubator that inspired Ida B. Wells-Barnett’s advocacy and was a hotbed for the Civil Rights movement. Despite Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.’s assassination while visiting Memphis in 1968, the city’s history has many bright spots.

Music lovers know Memphis as the place that gave us Stax Records, Sun Studio, and all of their artists. Food lovers crave its distinctive BBQ and famous soul cooking. Adjacent to the Memphis Convention Center, the downtown Sheraton overlooks the Mississippi River. It’s within walking distance of the legendary Beale Street and a short trolley ride away from other points of interest.

From the Underground Railroad Museum to the National Civil Rights Museum, from the W.C. Handy Home to Graceland, and from the Pink Palace to the Pyramid, there’s plenty to explore.

The local hosts are putting together events that represent the city’s unique history and culture, so come to Memphis for a conference you won’t soon forget.

Texas Christian University’s Department of Journalism congratulates Dr. Melita M. Garza, associate professor of journalism, on the release of her important and timely book, “They Came to Toil: Newspaper Representations of Mexicans and Immigrants in the Great Depression.” In the book, Dr. Garza, a former reporter for the Milwaukee Journal, the Los Angeles Times, the Chicago Tribune and Bloomberg News, shows how news reports about forced deportations of Mexican-Americans during the Great Depression of the 1930s contributed to stereotypes that endure today.
